Welcome

These messages were written prior to the changed format of the conference.

In cooperation with ICSSPE, the 2020 Yokohama Sport Conference will be held in Yokohama over a five-day period, September 8–12, 2020, following the 2020 Summer Olympics and Paralympics. It will be the first time in half a century for Japan to host this international conference. The conference venue is located in Yokohama, which is next to Tokyo and can be very easily accessed from Japan's foremost international airports, Narita and Haneda. Yokohama is also a historic and cosmopolitan city and is the place from where Japan was opened up to foreign trade following its long period of national seclusion.

The theme of the 2020 Yokohama Sport Conference is “Contributing to a Sustainable World.” In this day and age, various innovations in technology have left our world and planet facing a mountain of problems. Fortunately, though, the area of physical education, health and sport in which we are involved holds much value that can benefit everyone, nurturing and enhancing us, maintaining our physical and mental health, and allowing us to share fun with each other. More than just people gathering from various disciplines around the world to exchange views, engage in discussion and rediscover that value, let us strive to pool our wisdom to create shared value and contribute to a sustainable world?

We look forward to seeing you all in Yokohama.

Michiyoshi Ae, Senshi Fukashiro
Presidents of the 2020 Yokohama Sport Conference

We are delighted to announce that the 2020 Yokohama Sport Conference will take place from Tuesday 8 September to Saturday 12 September at PACIFICO Yokohama North, in Yokohama, Japan.

With this conference, which is taken place in the timely context of the 2020 Olympic and Paralympic Summer Games, we invite you to return to the host country of the 1964 Olympic Games. With this conference we intend to provide an international, interdisciplinary scientific meeting-place for physical education, sport, and health sciences.

In 2015, the UNESCO's International Charter of Physical Education, Physical Activity and Sport was completely revised to emphasis the fact that physical education, physical activity and sport can yield a wide range of benefits to individuals, communities and society at large. In the same year, the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development was adopted by the United Nations. The Agenda clearly stated that sport plays an important role in achieving the 17 international goals.

The theme of the Yokohama conference, preparations for which are currently well underway, is “contributing to a sustainable world”. Our goal is to build a better society through physical activity and sport, and to deepen discussions on an international level that contribute to world peace. In the wind of the international community becoming globalised and commercialised, the social environment surrounding sport is changing drastically. The Yokohama conference aims to contribute to the future and by promoting dialogue among the people from different social positions and different academic fields, such as sport-related technologies, human rights, and sports business.

To make it easier for young researchers in undergraduate or graduate programmes to participate in the conference, registration fees have been more than halved for students. The conference will give you the opportunity to engage in dialogue across different generations. I hope you will join us in being part of an international research network aspiring for the future of sustainable societies through sport.

In welcoming researchers, practitioners, and others from around the world to participate in the Yokohama conference, I hope we can count on the cooperation and support from many different areas in order to make this conference and enriching experience for everyone.

Significance of this conference

The first major international sport science conference was held in 1964, when the Tokyo Olympic Games were held in Japan. Since then it has been held every four years in the country where the Olympic and Paralympic Games are held. On this occasion of the Olympic and Paralympic Games being held once again in Tokyo in 2020, this conference will be held with the cooperation of the International Council of Sport Science and Physical Education (ICSSPE), with the aim of carrying on the history of these international conferences in Japan and contributing significantly to advances in this area and to development of human society.

The ICSSPE is an international organisation established for the purpose of promoting scientific research into physical activity, recreation and sport. It was formed in Paris in 1958 as the International Council of Sport and Physical Education (ICSPE), and changed its name as to ICSSPE in 1982. Membership of the ICSSPE currently consists of approximately 230 international and domestic organisations involved in sport, physical education and sport science, and its activities are conducted in close cooperation with organisations such as the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the International Olympic Committee (IOC), the World Health Organization (WHO), and the International Federation of Sports Medicine (FIMS). ICSSPE contributes to the development of human society through advocating investigation and research, education and healthy sport activities, creating interdisciplinary cooperative relationships via the world's largest network in this field interconnecting several million people.

Even in this day and age when international conferences are no longer a rarity, it is an extremely unique and valuable opportunity to have those multi-disciplinary and multi-industry experts in physical education, physical activity and sport gather in one place to collaborate in exploring clues for resolving complex social issues and developing a vision for our future.

6. Conference structure

1) Theme

Contributing to a Sustainable World

-Aiming for a world where diverse people live together; Contribution of physical education, health and sports science

2) Conference language

English (with some parts in Japanese)

3) Purpose of the conference

The conference programme consists of a variety of categories which incorporate the main theme, “Contributing to a Sustainable World - Aiming for a world where diverse people live together; Contribution of physical education, health and sports science”. Symposiums, which follow the Special Sessions, will stimulate the creation of new awareness and new research and development, by promoting more in-depth discussion based on the key principles of a cross-cutting, highly interdisciplinary approach and international comparison encompassing diverse cultural spheres. In addition, the general research presentations will provide ample opportunity for exchange among researchers within and between different categories.
